General Data Protection Regulation

From 25 May 2018, all organisations that process personal data will need to comply with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), whilst the new ePrivacy Regulation will bring changes to direct marketing rules and new obligations for IT-based communications providers.

The GDPR includes new concepts such as the 'right to be forgotten' which businesses need to fully understand and prepare themselves for. It is not just reputation that is at stake. Breaching the law could give rise to a fine of up to EUR 20 million or 4% of an organisations' global annual turnover, whichever is higher.

We offer our clients full legal advice in the area of data protection.

Our services include:

- legal assistance in the development of comprehensive personal data protection documentation
- substantive preparation of the personal data administrators to comply with the GDPR
- offering support to data protection officers (DPOs)
- preparation of applications for the registration of databases with the Polish Inspector General for the Protection of Personal Data (GIODO)
- representation in GIODO proceedings
- personal data protection audits
- invasion of privacy issues
- advice on the development of internal data protection documentation
- preparation of consents for the processing of personal data
- development and implementation of privacy, security and cookie policies
- legal assistance and support with the ePrivacy Regulation
- registration of DPO with GIODO and preparing updates regarding changes of DPO
- advising on transfers of personal data to third countries based on the Privacy Shield and EU Model Contracts

"They are incisive and incredibly supportive. You can see that they are working in your best interest."

Director of
Koenig & Bauer AG

"Grzegorz Woźniak and Grzegorz Dudek are key names in Woźniak Legal's 'outstanding' team. The team is a popular choice for Japanese clients, assisting individuals with inheritance issues and advising companies on immigration matters. Other highlights included acting for the heirs of pre-war property owners in Warsaw."

The Legal 500, 2017

"Clients describe Grzegorz Woźniak as a great strategist focused on resolving clients' problems and a first class lawyer, very practical and goal-oriented."

Chambers Global, 2011
