Dispute Resolution

Our dispute resolution practice serves a wide range of entrepreneurial clients, from individuals through to larger, international organisations and listed companies.

Disputes can vary in significance from business critical to important but peripheral. That is why we consider all the available options and, where possible, avoid litigation by employing other approaches. When litigation is the necessary and appropriate route, we are relentless and tenacious in the protection of our clients' interests and in pursuit of the best possible outcomes.

Our first concerns are the commercial objectives of our clients and we will assess what is best for the business – the legal, financial and reputational risks to our clients and the strengths and weaknesses of our opponents' position. This assessment enables us to focus on developing the best approach, either through the most effective procedural tactics or creative settlement options.

No matter the issue, our robust approach is characterised by a focus on tested pre-emptive strategies, seeking to press or negate claims before they escalate, first-class case management and the identification of the best settlement options for our clients.

We advise and assist with:

- disputes arising from M&A transactions
- commercial dispute resolution
- defamation and reputation management
- fraud
- freedom of expression and human rights
- insurance liability
- intellectual property disputes
- international arbitration
- media disputes
- personal injury
- professional negligence
- employment disputes
- real estate litigation
